A young wife tells of a trying but ludi-rous incident which offered a fair chance for a trial of temper. Sie was the mistress of a brisk young maid of all work, who nder an enthusiastic mistress soon be came interested in the pretty new home made bright by many welding presents. Among the latter the newly married pair were very proud of a certain spoon that was sent from foreign lands, and besides a history" had some old fashioned exidiant and chasles. The maid was cleaning ast of countenance, exclaiming with great cide, "Fee done it at last, mum," and eld aloft the curious spoon with a handle a smooth and shiny as un. WOULD IT FLOWERS

Once on a time, to woo a maid, Three suitors sought her bower, Give me, I pray," the maiden said To each, "thy favorite flower,"

The lord he took a lily fair That grew in regal pride; "This flower put in thy raven hair: Twill suit a noble's brids."

"This flower place on thy breast."
The bard a violet gave and sighed,
"Ah! near thee let it rest."

The knight he plucked a rose and cried.

And meet me in my bower, And ye shall learn," the maid replied. 'How fares it with each flower. At autumn tide they stood once more Heside the uniden bright; Then from a vase the flowers she bore And placed them in their sight.

The lily leaves were dull and strained, The odorous violet fresh remained—
"The bard," she cried, "Til wed,"

How to Brush the Teeth. In the first place one should have two brushes, one hard and one soft. The hard one should not be hard enough to injure the gams. water should be moderately hot, and should be held in the mouth for a minute or more before the brush is applied. This will soften the accumulations. Next take the soft brush and scrub the surfaces of the teeth vigorously, going over all parts "inside," "outside," and "on top," to use phrases commonly understood. After this has been thoroughly done, and the mouth rinsed out, the hard brush is to be used. Both brushes should have curved (concave) surfaces and serated bristles. In using the hard brush hold it in the hand and rotate the wrist, thus brushing the surfaces of the teeth from the gums toward the cut-The mouth is held slightly open. This emoves from between the teeth whatever was there at the outset and what has been crowded there by the ordinary action with the first brush. Even more thoronchness is required in this last procedure than in the first. It is between the teeth that detween the teeth that so few people succeed in cleansing. As a final safeguard waxed teeth, and hatly the mouth sprayed with listerine dilution The teeth should be cleansed on retiring and arising, and if convenient after each meal. The first two are, however, the important hours. Thorough cleansing will do much to prevent decay. Though decay is caused by bacteria, it only results from the presence of fermentation. There can be no fermentation in a clean month.-New York Herald. Ex-Senator Conkling's Income. When Roscoe Conkling retired from the senate it was announced that he intended to devote himself to the law, and further that he proposed to pay off in one year debts to the amount of $125,000. It is said that he did it, and in a few years prior to his death his yearly income from his practice approached $200,000. This success was not due to the fact that he was a statesman, although that of course was an advertise-ment for him. But the sort of people who pay heavy fees for legal services do not employ a man solely because he is a statesman. A man may be a great statesman who is not a great lawyer. Mr. Conkling resumed the practice of law with many advantages. He had a large acquaintance among wealthy men, and his warfare in politics had sharpened his wits, so he pros-pered at an almost phenomenal pace.—

The virtues of the apple as a fruit have en celebrated from time immemorial, and few fruits have so many legends asso-ciated with them. The garden of the Hesperides was the garden of the golden apple, ust as our Avalon is the Isle of Apples. "Of all fruits," it has been written, apple seems to have had widest and most mystical history. The myths concerning it meet us in every age and country. Aphronite bears it in her hand as well as Eve. The serpent guards it; the dragon

It is celebrated by Solomon; is the healig fruit of Arabian tales. Ulysses longs for it in the gardens of Alcinous, Tantalus grasps vainly for it in Hades. In the prose Edda it is written: "Idnna keeps in a box apples which the gods, when they feel old age approaching, have only to taste to be-come young again. It is in this manner that they will be kept in renovated youth until Ragnarok—the general destruction. Azrael, the angel of death, accomplished his mission by holding it to his nostrile and in folk-iore Snowdrop is tempted to death by an apple, half of which a crone as poisoned, but recovers life when the fruit falls from her lips.

The Golden Bird seeks the Golden Ap-les of the king's garden in many a Norse tory, and when the tree bears no more Frau Bertha reveals to her favorite that it because a mouse gnaws at the tree's root. Indeed, the kind mother goddess is sometimes personified as an apple tree, but oftener the apple is the tempter in northern mythology and sometimes makes the best for circuits.

MR. M'SWAT AS A PROTECTOR.

Life Is Nothing to Him When There Are

"Billiger! Hark!"
Mrs. McSwat sat straight up in bed and

"What is it, Lobella?" inquired Mr. Mo-Swat drowally.
"It sounds like somebody talking. List-

Mr. McSwat listoned. He, too, thought he heard something.
"I will see what it is," he said, speaking very loudly and moving very leisurely. "Don't be alarmed, Lobelia. We are well armed. Heside these two revolvers," he continued, in a high pitched voice intended to terrify any unauthorized persons that might be in the house, "I have a heavy cane and a large glass paper weight. Be calm, Lobelia!"

He crawled out of bed, collected his arsenal, and the procession moved down stairs in the following order:

Mr. McSwat, with revolver In each hand, heavy cane poper weight in pocket of his curl papers, lamp in one hand, and bottle of cam-

At the landing half way down Mr. Mo-Swat stopped.
"Lobelia," he observed, sternly, "it will be necessary for you to go in front. You have the lamp. I'll protect you."

Mrs. McSwat took her place in front as directed, and the procession moved on again. At the foot of the stairs Billiger stopped and took up a commanding position near the hall rack.

"Now, Lobelia, go ahead with the lamp into this room on the left. I will remain here to see if anybody rushes out. If any-body does rush out," he exclaimed, grinding his teeth in a manner horrible to hear, "I will put fourteen bullets through him, LOST - A BLUE GREY-ROUND PUP SIX knock him down with this paper weight and break every bone in his body with this came?"

left and looked around. "Do you see anything, Lobella?" asked her husband in a voice of thunder. "No, Billiger." "Go through the other rooms" he roared, bracing himself firmly against the wall.

tion and trembling with ungovernable fe-rocity, Lobelia explored all the rooms and came back. "Did you see anything?" he demanded. "Not a thing, Billiger."

"Give me the lamp!"
